Acceptable Quality and User Guidelines

This vinyl plank flooring is designed for internal environments including floors, walls, etc, and is not warranted for external use. Furthermore, vinyl plank flooring should not be installed as a floated floor as it is only warranted as a direct stick installation.

Vinyl plank flooring must be installed in a regulated and liveable environment in which the area is occupied and protected from direct heat and sunlight. If not protected, the product could expand and contract abnormally, sliding doors and/or windows therefore need to be covered by blinds or curtains. Heating and cooling systems must be in place and used to control the internal temperatures. The temperature of the dwelling must always be maintained between 18-28°C and a relative humidity of 40-65%.

Load Bearing Capabilities

Both the weight and distribution area of loads placed on vinyl plank flooring can potentially affect the flooring's integrity. Care must be taken to avoid the below loads:

- 1. High Point Loads: Avoid placing objects with concentrated weight against the flooring as these can damage the floor surface. Examples include but are not limited to stiletto heels.
- 2. Dynamic Loads: The flooring may be more susceptible to damage from dynamic loads caused by rolling, sliding, or dragging heavy objects e.g. office chairs, fridges etc.
- 3. Constant Loads: Concentrated loads from items such as furniture legs or cabinets should be mitigated by using felt pads to distribute the weight and minimize potential wear or damage.

Major Failure

Vinyl plank flooring is highly resistant to chips, scratches, stains, and wear, but is still not "proof" in any respects (i.e., scratch proof).

Slight colour and/or pattern variation from batch to batch may occur, minor gaps between the joins of each board might be caused by temperature change. Please note these minor gaps, batch colour and/or pattern variation, chips, scratches are not considered as major failure. Once floor has been installed, it is considered that the product has been accepted by the installer/contractor.
